CHANGE:HEALTHCARE INCREASING STAFF TO MATCH GROWTH

NASHVILLE, Tenn., (November 30, 2009) – Consumer technology company change:healthcare is adding two more data and programming experts in support of the firm’s continued growth. Michael Vuovich has been named director of data architecture and Josh Owens appointed as a data programmer company Co-Founders Christopher Parks and Robert Hendrick announced today.

The company uses the web to provide information to employers, employees and consumers about the cost of healthcare in their local areas, pinpointing how they can save money when purchasing pharmaceuticals, products, services and other care.

“Both Michael and Josh bring a wealth of data consulting experience to us and we’re pleased to have been able to attract them to the change:healthcare team,” Parks said in making the appointments. “Gathering and managing today’s healthcare data in innovative ways has given us an edge in helping companies and employees save money in their healthcare purchases. We expect both of these professionals to take our efforts to entirely new levels, especially as companies seek to better control their healthcare benefit expenditures in this ever evolving healthcare market.”

Vuovich comes to change:healthcare from Ermas Consulting, an Atlanta-based financial services consulting firm that has helped a number of Fortune 500 companies better manage and leverage their data. His healthcare experience includes time spent at both Emory University’s Robbins School of Public Health and Mercer Health and Benefits in the Government Human Services Consulting division.

He holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Dartmouth College and a Master of Public Health degree from Emory University.

Owens has been a web planner, developer and IT analyst for a number of companies including Ardis Marketing Group in New York, Intridea in Washington, DC. and both Avon Products and Pomeroy Computer Resources in Cincinnati, where he currently resides. He's also owned and managed his own businesses – Four Bean Soup, a web application company, and Steelpixel, a company offering web hosting and technology services.

He attended Miami University and University of Phoenix.
